

When I look at you I need to let you know where I stand, when it comes to our relationship of trust and understanding, then you will know why I say, you made me this way. Coming home late at night when work has been over hours ago, you need to be here with your family. Staying out late when you and I know that time could be spent with us, and I know you're not spending all those late nights with your friends because I've called your friends and they said, we haven't seen he in weeks. Talking on the phone late in the night as I hear you whispering to who I think is your lover! The woman you been calling your stay out late night friends. So when I come to you talking shit and tell you,you made me this way! Now you know.
